Here is the sixth delight for you Puzzle-Lovers! In this one we have hidden some of the names of cars. Have Fun!!!!!! Fine as many cars as you can! If you have the most cars by Tuesday you will win a hamburger and milkshake from the Cove. In case of a tie, the first one to turn it in will win. The winner of last week's BLOCKBUSTER was Barbara Relf. She had her entry in by 11:55.

No Deutsch needed in Salzburg

Ever thought of spending a year in Salzburg?

The University of Portland's extension in Salzburg, Austria was established in 1964 by Rev. Paul E. Waldschmidt, CSC, not primarily as a language program, but for liberal arts students who might otherwise not have an opportunity to take part in a foreign study program.

Students who participate in the program (known as "The Salzburgers") take fifteen hours a semester during a four-day week: philosophy, theology, European political systems, fine arts (European style) and a German language course.

These courses are taught by Austrian professors from Salzburg University who are hired by the University of Portland. Except for the German language course, all classes are taught in English.

The facilities are rented for the students' use by UP; the Center, which serves as a classroom complex and gathering place, and rooms in the Pension Jussy and Gasthof Sterne as student residences.

Rev. Gregory Lombardo, CSC, past director of the Salzburg program, says: "The Salzburgers travel a lot more than they used to. Previous groups stayed around the Center on the weekends, but lately these kids have been traveling all the time." Before the student is officially admitted to the program, he must sign a student contract which provides for a shift of responsibility from the school to the student and his parents.

The number of Salzburgers has fluctuated in past years from 30 to 37; keeping the group small fosters a sense of friendship and permits the group as a whole to travel to and from Salzburg, and on Spring and Christmas breaks more easily.

The present group of students departed from New York in the middle of August and are expected to return approximately the middle of May, 1972. Rev. Joseph Powers, CSC, is the present director of the program in Salzburg, replacing Fr. Lombardo.

Salzburg brochure to be renovated

In line with changes in the entire program, a new brochure explaining the University of Portland Extension in Salzburg, Austria, has been sent to the printers. With the help of Rev. Joseph Haley CSC (Director of the Salzburg Program on campus), the 1970-71 returning Salzburgers have been meeting frequently to discuss projects that will increase the appeal of the program.

It was decided that the old brochure was hard to read and the color was inappropriate. Also, changes in the cost and organization of the program make it inaccurate. The new brochure will go to high schools and to parents of interested students as well as University of Portland students on campus.

will see that it is re-cycled.

So, could all you people please start saving your bottles, cans, and papers for OSPIRG. Then please put them in the right boxes which will be set up for your convenience. Help OSPIRG clean up your environment and keep ecology from being man's last fad.

OSPIRG starts recycling campaign

U of P is now working on its first campus project. They are starting a re-cycling program in which there will be designated places throughout the campus for the students to bring their bottles, cans and paper. The Local Chapter of OSPIRG on this campus will see that the re-cycleable trash is then brought to the OSPIRG chapter at Portland State University which

Salzburgers find difficulty readjusting to life at UP

When U. of P. students return from their year in Salzburg they find it nearly impossible to describe their experiences. To most Salzburgers, it seems that a great adjustment must be made in order to fit once again into campus life. Here are some of the students reactions to coming back to school after a year in Europe.

Tessie Toomey

"It's not as bad as I expected, but I feel kind of washed out. The first chance I get I'm going back."

Peggy Marostica

"Austria seems far away, but not as far as it used to be. Going back is with in reach. I don't think I'll ever completely readjust again."

Sam Artis

"Readjusting wasn't what

Phi Alpha Theta to present architecture talk

Phi Alpha Theta, the international history honor society, will present George A. McMath, AIA, in a slide-lecture program entitled "Architectural Views and Vistas of Portland." The program will feature historical buildings in Portland, including West Hall.

The program will be given in Mehling Auditorium on October 27, at 7:30 p.m. There is an admission charge of 50 cents and the program is open to the public.

McMath is currently a partner in the architectural firm of Allen, McMath & Hawkins. He received his BA in Architecture at the University of Oregon in 1959, and is chairman of the Portland Historical Landmark Commission, Past Chairman of the Historical Buildings Committee, a member of the Society of Architectural Historians, Oregon Historical Society, the American Institute of Architects, and the Oregon Landmark Commission.

He is also co-author of the book, "A Century of Portland Architecture."

I had expected, but the year abroad was well worth the small inconvenience."

Fred Klimetz

"I felt pretty much like something special at first—that I should be considered somehow superior since I had been through this European experience. After that brief period I felt really out of it, out of touch with too many students and that I had lost track of what the mainstream of the school was doing. I am still trying to overcome, to find a balance to the latter attitude, but still feel it strongly."

Tim O'Malley

"It's hard to settle down.

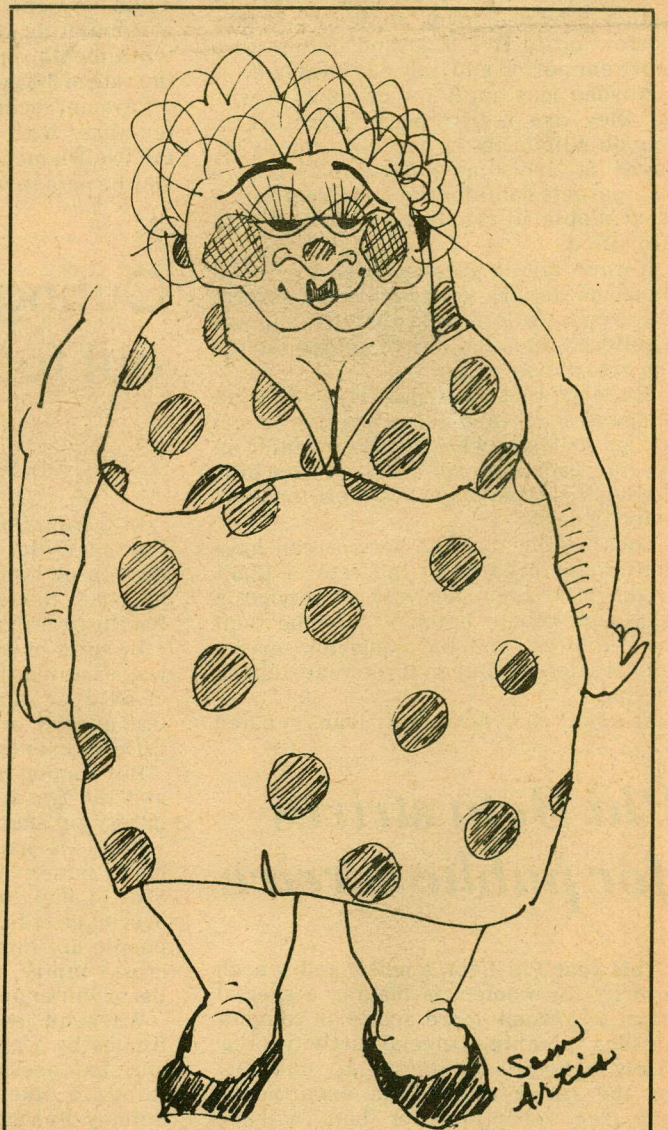

I'm used to taking off every weekend. The pace here is a lot slower."

Meri Teske

"Adjustment was difficult—very difficult at first. It was like being a freshman all over again. Feeling lost and not knowing anyone but other Salzburgers. At times it seemed worse than being a frosh because you realize you're a Junior and shouldn't feel that lost. But the small adjustments that were made were well worth the year in Salzburg."

Patti Campbell

"It seems like a dream now. I have to go back and make it real. I liked it. I liked it."

Seven barrels of fun

There will be "Seven Barrels of Fun" for everyone at the all-school party sponsored by Sigma Tau Omega, tonight, Oct. 22 from 7:00 until 12:00, in the Holy Cross Parish Hall. Admission to the "gala" event will be only one thin dollar (that's right, $1.00). So jump into those ruby red slippers and slide on down for a good time.
